

Abstract of the Disclosure

Since it is possible to exhaust air from a first peripheral region α around a substrate undergoing processing and further exhaust air from a second . 5 peripheral region β between the first peripheral region and the substrate, it is possible to reduce the effects of air flow on a developing solution on a substrate, and to enable the developing solution used in development processing to act effectively on the exposed resist on 10 the substrate.